

The market town of Okehampton is richly served by charming independent shops as well as several major supermarkets. Red Lion Yard is a lovely retail area, which used to be the stabling yard of the Red Lion Hotel.

Not many towns, particularly small rural towns, can boast an original Victorian arcade, such as can be seen in Okehampton. It offers the local community an eclectic range of independent retailers, providing everything from fresh produce to local services.

Okehampton has a wealth of pubs, cafés, tea rooms, and restaurants, where you will find delicious home-made, locally produced food. Or buy your ingredients from any of the lovely supermarkets, bakery, or health food shops and create your own picnic to enjoy in the park, in the woods beside the river, or up on the moor.

Okehampton is a Gateway to Dartmoor. You can walk directly out onto the moor from the town via Simmons Park or from the top of Station Road. Alternatively enjoy an adventure of discovery by following the Okehampton Town Trail www.visitokehampton.co.uk/walks

Timetable It takes roughly 15 minutes to walk from the station down to the town centre, but leave 20 minutes to walk back up! Or you can save your legs by taking the 118 bus, please see the timetable below.

Welcome to Okehampton!

Okehampton was founded by the Saxons, the earliest written record of the settlement is from 980 AD as Ocmundtune, meaning settlement by the Ockment, a river which runs through the town.

The town is home to the fascinating and magical Museum of Dartmoor Life which also houses the Okehampton Tourist Information Centre.

Picturesque Okehampton Castle (which dates back to the Domesday Book) sits in an elevated position above Okehampton's Old Town Park Nature Reserve which offers some wonderful walks.

(See Visit Dartmoor website)

Simmons Park was gifted to the town by Sydney Simmons in 1906, with woodland walks, ornamental fountains and waterfalls, riverside walks, beautiful gardens, bowling green and a children's adventure area; it has so much to offer.
